

Sing Tao's Headquarter Relocation

BENEFITS

- Upgraded data storage with 24x7 service monitoring
- Minimized production environment downtime
- Fast and smooth relocation time in 1 month

CHALLENGES

- The risk of data loss during relocation of its headquarter: 27 racks equipment of around 200 servers, network and storage to be relocated
- Inconvenience of the whole system being migrated to a new location
- Difficulties to cope with business growth with outdated equipment

SOLUTIONS

- OneAsia serves as the managed service provider while the data centre is powered by Newtech
- Layer 2 extension and multi-phase relocation applications

As the engine for the Sing Tao Group's long term growth, the Sing Tao media branch occupies a strategic position in the overall development of the Group. In addition to print media, the Group is also dedicated to providing a full range of online and mobile platforms to tap into new reader segments and additional revenue sources. In line with the development in the industry, the Group aims to build a multi-media business to meet the evolving demands and diverse needs of the market. Coping with the expansion of its business, the company relocated its headquarter from Sau Kei Wan to Tseung Kwan O. OneAsia, collaborating with Newtech's data centre, serves as the managed service provider to relocate all the racks equipment, a total of around 200 servers. Layer 2 extension method is employed and the entire system is migrated to the new location in 4 phases. Downtime was minimized as OneAsia's migration team worked at midnight to avoid disturbance to Sing Tao's daily operation. Newtech built the cold aisles containment and provides new network equipment such as Server Zone, DMZ, office design and build.

The complete Sing Tao relocation project includes OneAsia's IP phone and relocation service, along with the building of data centre, cabling work of 2300 cat6 port from Newtech. Boosted by OneAsia's services and Newtech's data centre, the Sing Tao Group now enjoys a much more stable and convenient network for the future growth of the company.
